PROJECT:

- SCHEMES TO DETECT DATA POISON UNDER DISTRIBUTED ENVIRONMENT

Description:

This project introduces a cross-learning mechanism that generates training loops and establishes a mathematical model to find the optimal number of loops. It also presents an improved data poison detection scheme for semi-DML and an optimal resource allocation approach. Simulation results show significant improvements in model accuracy, up to 20% for support vector machines and 60% for logistic regression in basic-DML. In semi-DML, the scheme reduces wasted resources by 20-100%.

COURSES:

Java programming

- Udemy, complete beginner to advanced

Java Full Stack

- I am doing a Java Full Stack course at iHub Talent Info Systems Institute in Hyderabad.
